Course Description and Objectives: This course is the general survey of world history required as part of Kennesaw State University's General Education Program. There has been some problem in the past with college graduates leaving school without an adequate general understanding of the world community. In a world where business, government, and education are becoming more global enterprises, generally educated citizens need a broader historical background. In this course, then, we will cover a great deal of material from earliest times and the arrival of "civilization" all the way to the present day. We will examine the most important people, ideas, movements, and events all in world terms including: the greatest cultures of antiquity, the development of the world's most prevalent religions, the ebb and flow of Empires across the world, the "awakening" of the West in the Early Modern era, the Industrial Revolution (and the rise of industrial capitalism) and its political and social influences, the era of High Imperialism and particular "colonial encounters," the World Wars, and finally the world dimensions of the "Cold War" in the 20th Century.

Texts for the Course: The course requires only one text book which is listed below. There are, however, two other outside readings, also listed below.

Jerry H. Bentley, Herbert F. Ziegler, and Heather E. Streets, eds. Traditions and Encounters: A Brief Global History. (New York: McGraw Hill).

Bartolomeo De Las Casas. A Brief Account of the Destruction of the Indies

Karl Marx and Frederick Engels. The Communist Manifesto

Participation, Class Conduct and Ethics: It is important for students to have consistent and regular attendance in class. The professor emphasizes class lectures on the exams so attendance is extremely important. At the collegiate level, the classroom certainly represents a community of learning and distractions or disrespectful conduct inhibits the learning of all. As such, the students are expected to be attentive, engaged and respectful to both the instructor and the other members of the class. The professor includes a percentage of the total grade based on participation and conduct and calculates this portion of the grade subjectively. Finally, all students are expected to adhere to the Reinhardt standards of honesty. All work must, of course, be your own and any instances of dishonesty are subject to the disciplinary policies of the Kennesaw State Code of Academic Honesty.

Examinations: There will be three examinations in the class. Each exam will be worth 100 points toward your final grade, and so 300 points in total. My exams are multiple-choice. Each exam will cover one of the three modules of the course (Antiquity, The Era of Equilibrium Among Civilizations, and the Modern Era of Disequilibrium). As such, the Final Exam is not cumulative.

Quizzes: There will be three quizzes in the course, based on outside readings. Quizzes will be worth twenty points each and 60 points in total. The first quiz will simply cover basic world geography as this understanding will be essential to the course. The second deals with the Spanish “Conquistadores” in the New World during the 1500’s. The final reading will be Karl Marx’s “Communist Manifesto,” which inspired people all over the world to turn away from industrial capitalism and toward Communist societies...the results of which, of course, are still with us.

Grading: The Grading scale is a simple “raw points” and percentage system, with no weighting. The totals are as follows:

Exams	300
Quizzes	60
Part.	40
Total:	400
